

SENSI: MADE IN ITALY SINCE 1962

The spa world's most popular slipper comes, like so many other great shoes, from Italy. In the town of Assisi - famous for its monastery and what is probably the world's most exclusive olive oil - the Sensi corporation produces the slippers that have become an instant success all over the world. Good-looking, light-weight, easy to clean and with a nice price to top it off - that's the winning combination of factors which have made the Sensi shoes a must-have for spas and spa-goers around the world.

The story about the popular slippers starts far away from the spa world's serene surroundings, however. Professional fishermen were the first to discover the shoe in the early 1960s. It worked well on the slippery surface of the boat decks and it didn't break even with tough usage. In fact, the fishermen found the Sensi slipper so perfect that they convinced the company to sign a contract never to change the particular fishermen's model!

The fishermen's model is still produced, but the company has since added a number of new models to its range of products. One model is created especially for the Italian military, which puts great emphasis on keeping the feet of its personnel in great condition. Spa facilities, spa guests and tourists to beach resorts, on the other hand, opt for the more fashionable models created in recent years. These have kept the ergonomic properties as well as the practical material of the original shoe, but with added design features to make the shoes an attractive buy. For spa facilities, the Sensi slippers are ideal since they can take frequent usage and cleaning without breaking or losing in form or color. The many different models and available colors make it easy to match the existing color- and design scheme of the facility.
